

A GLIMPSE INTO THE PAST

Sets such as this one are rare: their provenance is clear, and their dating is virtually indisputable.

Nonetheless, the basic outline of events surrounding this little set seem fairly barebones: in 1889-90, a young man named Phillip Tod won his Arlington Chess Association division. For this, he was awarded a Jaques of London chess set by the Association's president, Neil Kennedy. Tod went on to become an accountant, married, moved to Canada, fought in the War, had two sons, and died. We do not know what happened after that.

So is that it? Not at all, no more than such an outline would capture your life or your "time". So, we have to dig and think a bit more. And once we start digging and thinking, we realize that the true value of an object such as this chess set is that it motivates us to try and understand the past as best as we can.

So let's dig and think and try...

The Arlington Baths

Young Phillip Tod received his first place award of a Jaques chess set from the Arlington Chess Association, which met daily at the Arlington Baths in Glasgow, Scotland.

The Arlington Baths Club is a nineteenth-century complex of buildings in Glasgow, originally built during 1870–71, and opening on the 1 August 1871 as the Arlington Swimming Club.

It was built as part of the Charing Cross area, a hot bed of development on the westerly side of Glasgow. A large proportion of this development was the erection of tenement housing, or "terrace houses": the consequent availability of new residential property attracted the sorts of people who also became members of the Arlington Swimming Club.

“The Club was therefore created on the doorstep of its membership, the great majority of whom lived within easy walking distance. From this emerged the traditions of the Club. The membership appeared first thing in the morning before going to work and returned in the evening after work before going home in a regular twice daily ritual.” [Wikipedia]

The building itself was designed by John Burnet, and the original construction was a long, low, single-storey building. Its overall effect is one of general Classicism rather than specifically Palladian, despite some Italianate decorative elements. The building is heated with a plenum system, in which heated air is passed through the building by convection via built-in ducts, much like the ancient Roman hypocausts.

In 1875, a “Turkish Room” was added, as well as a number of smaller additions. By this time, the Club boasted of roughly six hundred members, primarily “rooted in the affluent mercantile class”.

[<http://www.arlingtonbaths.co.uk/>]

As well as providing amenities for various forms of physical exercise and steam baths, the complex of buildings must also have served a wider purpose as a civic centre of sorts. We know that the Arlington Chess Association met here, and, indeed, had met there since the building first opened its doors. By 1889, the Association had 40 members who met daily. Annual membership was 3 pounds, 3 shillings.

Neil Kennedy

By 1890, Mr Neil Kennedy was president of the Arlington Chess Association.

Kennedy, born circa 1837, was a bit over age 50 at the time of the 1889-1890 tournament. Kennedy was a “manufacturer and warehouse man”, and by 1881 he was the head of what seems a large family to us: himself, his wife, eight children and three servants. He was probably relatively affluent.

Kennedy was no mean chess player himself, and competed in various tournaments.

* Adjudicated.

On the 18th January, a match was played at the Glasgow Chess Club between a team of eighteen members of that club, and a team selected from the members of the Central and the Arlington Clubs. It was anticipated that the Glasgow Club would have had considerable difficulty in vanquishing these two strong clubs combined; its victory, however, was very decisive,—17 games to 11.

Kennedy also had turned his hand at least once to poetry of a sort. In 1877, he won second place in Scientific American's "Chess Acrostics" competition with this bit of doggerel.

CHESS ACROSTICS.

The Amateur World offered two prizes for the best Acrostic on the word chess. There was quite a large competition, and the prizes have just been awarded as follows:

FIRST PRIZE.

Chess is such a noble game,
How it does the soul inflame !
Ever pleasing, ever new,
Surely Chess has not its due;
Sad to say, 'tis known to few !
W. HARRIS (Wollaston).

SECOND PRIZE.

Can strife be banished from the homes of men,
Hence, by a charm to its own drowsy den ?
Each lover of The Game will answer, yes !
Such is thy pow'r to sway us, gentle Chess,
Serene thy realm, Calais, our Princess.
NEIL KENNEDY (Glasgow).

This second one recalls to mind one I perpetrated in German several years ago, in reply to a suggestion that a certain legal squabble might be adjusted over a chess board. I now translate it with a free hand to my mother tongue as follows:

Could we at Chess all disputes try
How quick we'd thrash the smaller fry !
Each Rook, or Knight, or Pawn and two
Should be compell'd his words to chew.
Steinitz would be my larger too !

THE AWARD

The Arlington Chess Association's choice of a Jaques chess set as a prize is not an especially surprising one, although it was (and is!) a handsome award. With Howard Staunton as their champion, part of Jaques' sales strategy was to sell sets to clubs and club players. This 1861 ad (courtesy Alan Fersht, with his express and kind permission) gives an idea of the range of sets produced even then.

By 1889, when the award set must have been purchased, the price of this set had risen to 17s 6d. This was roughly a week's wages for a solicitor's clerk, but a regularly-employed sewer flusher could have raised the money in five or so days. A female upholsterer would have worked ten or so days to make the money, while a butler might could have accrued the amount in 4 days. [Wage data ranges for entire Victorian period,

In 1908, Phillip removed to Canada. He was married by this time, and his wife, Edith, followed two years later. She brought their two young sons with her: Philip Leslie and James Brownlee Tod.

In 1917, Philip Sr, signed up for the army in 1917. He fudged his age by a couple of years on the enlistment documents. Here on this document we have the only signature of our Phillip, who so long ago won that chess set that he almost certainly still had with him.

It seems that Phillip did serve, as in 1919 he appears again in the record, this time going home from Southampton. His name appears twice on this record, incidentally.

The image shows two pages of a 'NOMINAL ROLL' from 1919, which is a list of military personnel. The left page is titled 'NOMINAL ROLL' and lists names, ranks, and dates of service. The right page is also titled 'NOMINAL ROLL' and lists names, ranks, and dates of service. The records include names like Phillip Todd and James Brownlee Tod.

It is possible that Phillip Tod died in 1934. It is difficult to tell, and probability lies against this one “Phillip” being our boy & man.

However, the father’s name (Andrew) is also a match. The mother’s name might also match” “Marion” and “Mary” are close, but common.

As stated earlier, the sons of Phillip are Philip Leslie and James Brownlee Tod. If alive now, they would be over 90 years old each...and they probably have moved, either to the USA or back to Scotland.

The set came to us as a restoration project from the owner, living in Sarasota, Florida. He was unaware of the set’s history, and did not know the owner prior to him. He wrote, “I am glad you are finding out more about the set!

Unfortunately the only information I can provide is that I bought it for $10 at a Goodwill in Sarasota, Florida a little over a year ago.” Goodwill is a USA-based chain of charity shops. Thinking that perhaps one of the sons died there last year, and that the little chess set of his father’s was donated as part of the estate being cleared out, we searched for both Philip Leslie and James Borwnlee...but with no results.

So there are still loose ends to be tied up before we know the full story of this traveler from the past.

* Many thanks to Richard Dewey, whose work most of this is.*
